Tell el-Amarna was founded by the New Kingdom pharaoh Akhenaten, son of Amenhotep III and Queen Tiye, husband of Nefertiti, and probable father of Tutankhamen. Akhenaten's mission was to elevate the innovative religious ideas of his father into a comprehensive alternative to the complex theological system inherited from Egypt's past. To break the power of traditional temple hierarchies elsewhere, he built a new capital on a virgin site midway between the historic capitals of Upper and Lower Egypt at Thebes and Memphis.
